How to Get Freelance Works?

The Best Websites from you will Get Freelance Work:

Fiverr

Fiverr gets its name from its site design: every job starts at $5. It sounds low, but you can set up tiers above the base $5 option, which adds up fast! It's also a great way to get started and build up your portfolio.

Upwork

They have over 12 million freelancers and 5 million clients listing upwards of 3 million freelance jobs each year. Just about every freelancer can find their niche here, but beware: Upwork takes a 20% cut until you build up a regular relationship with a client.

Freelancer

This site has a huge variety of projects, some formatted as hourly and some as contests – the only downside is that they only give 8 free applications before you have to pay the membership fee. The project fee is also a little different – pay between $3-5 or 3-5%, whichever is greater.

FlexJobs

This is a very well-curated site for not only freelance jobs but also remote and otherwise flexible gigs. It's sorted by the type of freelance job (or otherwise) you may want, and you won't have to worry about scam postings, because they research the jobs and monitor new gigs pretty thoroughly.

Indeed

Indeed collects all the jobs on the interwebs and puts them all in one place. They're easy to search through, and looking specifically for remote jobs is a piece of cake.
